

How to use the ENTELIS+ training modules

Table of Contents

1. How to use the training modules	2
1.1 For all students:	2
1.2 For trainers:	2

1. How to use the training modules

There are five training modules available, 2 basic training modules and 3 advanced training modules. The training modules have been developed to be as flexible as possible, taking into account a varied target audience.

Throughout the training modules, you will encounter the following features that have been included to facilitate the learning process. Each feature is used for a different purpose which is explained below.

1.1 For all students:

Additional reading: The additional reading feature is used to highlight additional reading materials that are available on the subject under discussion. Links are always provided to this material which the participant can access and read at their leisure.

Accessibility in action: The accessibility in action feature is used to highlight examples of accessibility being used in everyday life. The aim is to help the reader contextualise the information that is being presented.

1.2 For trainers:

Trainer tip: The trainer tip feature is used to highlight the guidance available for trainers. It may include additional information, explanation, a suggestion on how to present a specific idea or present questions to generate discussions. These should be used by the trainer both prior to and during the training sessions.